

Kathryn Johnson, M.A., BCBA

Board Certified Behavior Analyst

Kathryn has a double bachelors degree in psychology and cognitive science with a minor in education from the University of California Davis. She started her career as a behavior technician after graduating in 2018, and went on to complete her masters in Special Education (applied behavior analysis) from Arizona State University in 2020. She continued to work as an RBT until passing her BCBA exam in 2021. Kathryn has since gone on to work in both the educational and clinical settings as a BCBA, where she has worked with individuals of diverse age, culture, and ability. Kathryn is passionate about accepting neurodiversity, trauma informed practice, and advocacy for the disability community. She strongly believes in listening to Autistic voices and implementing their feedback into ethical practice.
